

What Makes a Quality Vitamin?

Drs. Foster & Smith Educational Staff

Vitamins can improve your health and the quality of your pet's life. Vitamins are as important for our pets as they are for us. They help regulate body processes, protect the body from environmental toxins, and break down nutrients such as carbohydrates, proteins, and fats so the body can utilize them. Vitamins work with minerals and enzymes for digestion, reproduction, muscle and bone growth, and maintenance of healthy skin and hair coat. All multivitamins for pets are not created equal. That's a fact. But how do you choose? How do you know a quality brand from one of lesser quality?

Qualities of a good vitamin

Did you know that taking too much of one vitamin can minimize, or eliminate the benefits of other vitamins? This is why a proper balance of vitamins is essential for your pet's good health. Other characteristics of quality vitamins include:

- Addition of fatty acids for skin and haircoat, such as the Omega-6 fatty acid linoleic acid
- At least 14 essential vitamins including Vitamin A, B-Complex, D, and E. Vitamins A and E are all-important antioxidants that help maintain a healthy immune system
- Vitamins and minerals in the correct ratio for your pet's good health
- High palatability (Lifestage Select® formulas are all formulated with a delicious bacon/liver flavor that will tempt the fussiest pet!)

All of the products in the Lifestage Select® Multivitamins have these attributes. In addition, look at the ingredient list of multivitamin supplements to see from which sources the vitamins and minerals are coming. For instance, our Lifestage Select products contain:

- B-Complex and zinc from Brewer's Yeast
- Potassium, Vitamins B2, C, and iodine from kelp
- Calcium from whey
- Fatty acids from marine sources
- Ingredients, as much as possible, from natural sources

Not all vitamin supplements contain these quality ingredients. Our advice to you is to check the label before giving any vitamin/mineral supplement to your pet. And, remember that whatever your particular pet's species or age, the right supplementation will help him live the best quality life possible. Lifestage Select® Multivitamins have the right product for your pet, cat, or dog, no matter if he is a pup, an adult, a senior, or a super-energetic adult.
