

Hideaways for Small Pets, the Importance of

Drs. Foster & Smith Educational Staff

Whether your small pet prefers burrowing deep into bedding, holing up inside a hutch, or taking cover in a large toy, she hides for security and solace. In nature, your small pet would be prey for larger animals. Therefore, your pet may instinctively hide whenever startled or threatened. She also seeks refuge when she feels the need to sleep, rest, or simply "get away from it all."

Offering your small pet the hiding places she needs is easy and economical, thanks to a wide variety of shelters, toys, and sleepers such as:

- Durable Lixit Igloo
- Natural-grass Bungalow or Tunnel cage accessories
- Soft and comfortable Super Sleeper Cozy Hammock and Fuzz-E-Floor (these are best for small pets that do not chew on cloth)
- Entertaining and relaxing Chewbular Play Tube

Whichever hideout you offer your small pet, be assured you're giving her a much-needed space where she can rest and de-stress.
