

Brewers Yeast Plus Vitamins Provides Nutritional Support

Drs. Foster & Smith Educational Staff

Brewer's yeast is a natural by-product of the brewing of beers and ales that is principally grown on barley, although it is sometimes grown on molasses. Our premium Brewers Yeast is a rich source of B-vitamins, selenium, chromium, and other trace elements. In addition, proteins (amino acids) account for a great percentage of the weight of high quality brewer's yeast.

Many of our customers have used our superior Brewers Yeast as a supplement to help conditions such as poor appetite. In addition, several winning dog breeders have reported great success with dry, itchy skin and dull haircoat when combining our Brewers Yeast with our Vitacoat® Plus.

Why our Brewers Yeast is the best

When looking for a source for our Brewers Yeast, we searched for outstanding purity and a product produced in a sanitary environment. Then we formulated it especially to tempt your pet's palate. Ordinary brewer's yeast has a very bitter flavor, so our Brewers Yeast is "de-bittered." Then we add garlic to make it extra palatable to your pet.

But the taste is not the only thing that makes our Brewers Yeast better. We further fortify it with marine lipid Omega-3 fatty acids, Omega-6 (linoleic) fatty acids, biotin, and zinc, all essential for healthy skin and haircoat.

The extra boost that our Brewers Yeast provides is the synergistic enhancement the fatty acids and biotin give to each other, doing double duty to maintain a lustrous haircoat and skin. In addition, brewer's yeast may help reduce off-season shedding and give your pet the nutritional advantage he needs.

Feel comfortable adding our premium Brewers Yeast to your pet's daily vitamin and mineral regimen.
